MILE STONES ON THE BRISTOL PIKE

Extract from Minutes of Insurance Company in 1764 Reveals Origin of Old Stone Markers.

From Watson's Manuscript Annals, in the Ridgway Library, Philadelphia the following extract from the minutes of the directors of the Philadelphia Contributionship for Ensuring Houses from Loss by Fire, May 18 1764 are here reproduced concerning the origin of the placing of the old mile stones along the Bristol pike from Philadelphia to Morrisville, for a copy of which the Gazette is indebted to Edwin S. Warner of Eddington

Peter Reeve, Joseph Saunders and Thomas Wharton, who were requested by the board of directors to apply the fines arising from non-attendance at the directors (since 1761) in purchasing mile stones, made the following report, viz

We, the subscribers beg leave to report to the directors of the Fire Insurance Office that agreeable to their request "that we would procure a sufficient number of mile stones and fix them on the road leading to Trenton Ferry, and apply to such persons as would be capable of measuring the distance and placing them properly -- that you would pay the cost and expense thereof out of the fines that were paid by the directors for non-attendance since the year 1761" We procured the stones and applied to John Lukens, Surveyor General, Phillip Syng, Jacob Lewis and Thomas Gordon, gentlemen, to join us in the measuring the distance from Philadelphia to the edge of the river at the ferry leading to Trenton, who cheerfully undertook the service and the 15th inst at 5 o'clock in the morning we began to measure from the middle of Market street in Front street, and at the distance of each mile affixed or planted a stone marked with proper characters to describe the distance from the city, and when arrived at the ferry, found it to be 29 miles and 24 chains to the edge of the river, having passed through the new road leading through Pennsbury Manor as it is the most direct and likely to be used, the distance being shortened more than a mile

The cost of the stones with the expense attending the planting them amount to thirty three pounds, seven shillings and five pence We have purchased two stones more than were necessary, being numbered 30 and 31 gave them to Nathaniel Parker, who promised to fix them on the road leading to New York The surveyor having made some observations and minutes on the road we here subjoin them

The company to construct a turnpike from Front street and Germantown road in the Northern Liberties through Frankford and Bristol to the ferry at Morrisville, was chartered 24 March 1803 It was stipulated that the company set up mile stones beginning at distance of one mile from the inter section of Front street and the Germantown road being marked with "the number of miles which each stone is distant from the commencement of said turnpike road"

The present stones are those of the turnpike company because the five mile stone stands five miles from the intersection of Front street with the Germantown road, but six miles from Market street. About where the present 10 mile stone stands there appears on an atlas of Philadelphia published in 1862 the "Eleven mile lane" running from the pike to the river, and on that line was the Eleven mile station on the Philadelphia and Trenton Railroad On the same Atlas the road to Dunk's Ferry leaves the turnpike at the west end of Eddington

Half a century ago or even in more recent days, such rescues by St Bernard dogs as the one recently from St Bernard's Pass were matters of comparatively frequent occurrence and many were the romantic tales told of the almost human intelligence displayed by the St Bernards of the famous hospice, which were specially trained by the monks to fulfil their errands of mercy The breed is in a very different position from that which it occupied many years ago, for practically the entire stock of St Bernards belonging to the hospice was wiped out by a terrific storm one winter's night This necessitated the monks rebuilding their strain from blood obtained from the plains below and other sources, a course which was taken much against their will, for they have prided themselves for generations upon the purity of the hospice strain

A REMARKABLE HEALTH RECORD

Forty-Eight Cases of Dangerous Diseases in Bristol in a Year With No Resultant Deaths--Board of Health Annual Report

At the regular meeting of the Bristol borough council held on Monday evening the president of the Board of Health submitted the following annual report

To the Burgess and Council of the Borough of Bristol —Gentlemen —In the year 1913 there were 265 births in the borough and 149 deaths, the deaths being a fraction less than 15 per 1000 which is the normal rate There have been 19 cases of typhoid fever 17 of diphtheria, and 12 of scarlet fever, and no death from any of these diseases

The freedom from mortality in this list of 48 cases of dangerous diseases is remarkable in that it has never occurred before in any year in the twenty years in which the Board of Health has been in existence, at least where there has been any such number of cases Measles has been abundant and 712 cases have been reported, with 3 deaths This is in accordance with statistics throughout the State, which show that each year, for several years there have been more deaths from measles than from scarlet fever

The 92 nuisances reported have been promptly and carefully attended to and abated In no instance has there been any difficulty with the offenders, who seem as desirous of obeying the law, as the officers are in enforcing it With the coming of the sewers, a considerable part of the nuisances now reported will no longer have reason for existence

There have been 282 houses placarded on account of contagious or infectious diseases and all of them have been thoroughly fumigated either by our own officers or by the householders themselves In the latter instances it is done under the direction of the attending physician who certifies to the board it has been properly and efficiently done

The disparity in the number of cases reported for placarding, 370 and the number of houses placarded, 282, is due to there frequently being more than one case in one house

We recommend that the fire plugs be opened once a month through this year it being at times evident the pipes are not yet entirely free from sediment.

All of which is respectfully submitted, HOWARD PURSELL M D
President Board of Health

Imagination.

It was a prominent local physician who was speaking and he said, "We should not announce cures unless they are real cures Imagination plays a great part in a patient's feelings Imagination must always be reckoned with in medicine—sometimes as a friend, sometimes as a foe I know a doctor who treated an old woman for typhoid fever, and on each visit he took her temperature by holding a thermometer under her tongue One day, when she had nearly recovered the doctor did not bother to take her temperature, and he had hardly got a hundred yards from the house when her son called him back 'Mother is worse,' said the man 'Come back at once,' the doctor returned On his entry into the sick room, the old woman looked up at him with angry and reproachful eyes 'Doctor' she said, why didn't you give me the jigger under me tongue today. That always done me more good than all the rest of your trash."

On Saturday afternoon the old Presbyterian church was well filled with more than two hundred policy holders of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company who had met there as members of the Health and Happiness League which is being organized wherever the company has policy-holders

While it is primarily an advertising plan and a protection to themselves in teaching their policy holders to take better care of themselves, yet if carried out it will bring incalculable benefit to every municipality in which the leagues are organized

Thomas Snelson the assistant superintendent in charge of the Bristol office and his agents were in charge of the meeting Any child between the ages of six and sixteen holding a policy in the company is eligible to membership Upon becoming a member of the Health and Happiness League the following pledge must be signed

I pledge

First I will do all in my power to help the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company to improve the health of its policy holders

I will do all in my power to preserve my own bodily health and add to the happiness of others

And I promise

First I will wash my hands and face before each meal and my mouth and teeth each morning and evening

Second As spitting is unclean and helps to spread consumption and other dangerous diseases I will not spit upon the public streets nor in public places

Third I will not use a public drinking cup I will use paper ones or carry my own cup

Fourth I will destroy every house fly I possibly can

Fifth I will never throw rubbish in the streets as dirty streets make sick people

Sixth I will do something to help my mother every day

Seventh I will try and do at least one kind act to someone every day

Eighth I will permit no rude or offensive word to pass my mouth even when provoked

Classes for instruction will be formed there being six departments, or courses—Boy Scouts Camp Fire Girls First Aid Hiking Home Nursing and Domestic science The Boy Scouts department is limited to boys above twelve years of age and the Camp Fire Girls the same age, but in the other four departments or divisions of instruction every member of the Health and Happiness League is eligible to membership

Wilbert J Longfellow, of New York City who is in charge of the work of the league was introduced and explained the plans as formulated by the Metropolitan Company The department of Boy Scouts will follow the general plan of the Boy Scouts of America and the members of each troop will be taken into the country and instructed in the work of building camps making fires swimming, cooking in the open air, and first aid duties in case of sickness or accident One of the requirements of a Boy Scout is to be clean in body and thought stand for clean speech clean sport clean habits and travel with a clean crowd and as a writer has said clean sport puts up the bars against gambling which goes hand in hand with all the mischief of the street and opens the doors to every crime on the calendar"

After a year's service as a Boy Scout a member is given a "service badge" To secure this badge the Scout must secure (a) A certificate from his parents that he has helped at home as required by his Health and Happiness League pledge, and put into practice the Scout laws regarding a good turn daily

b A certificate from the Scout Master showing that he has been regular in his attendance at the troop meetings and has carried out the Scout programme in a manner satisfactory to the Scout Master

c A certificate from his school teacher or employer that he has faithfully applied himself to his studies and conducted himself in harmony with the Scout laws The motto of the Scouts will be Be prepared to help others' and their efforts to be physically strong morally straight and mentally awake

The Camp Fire Girls will receive a course of instruction somewhat similar to the Boy Scouts being taught wood gathering fire building, plant study etc

The First Aid class will be instructed in emergency duties in case of accident or sickness, until a physician's services can be procured

The members of the Home Nursing class will be under the instruction of Miss Richardson the trained nurse and will be given elementary lessons on the care of the sick food for the sick bathing, bed making bandaging in fact all that will make the children useful in the home, and help to lighten the burden of the one in charge of the home

In the Domestic Science department lessons will be given in sewing cooking and the art of making the home more attractive

A Juvenile community will be organized by the election of mayor and four commissioners who will be guided by the rules of a commission form of government and will have supervision over the work of the league The mayor will be assisted by a Commissioner of Safety Commissioner of Welfare Commissioner of Health and Commissioner of Housing Conditions

Blanks were given to those desiring to be nominated and by securing the signatures of twenty members of the league their names will be printed upon the ballots and they will be regular nominees for the offices On Friday, January 30th, the election will be held at the office of the Metropolitan Insurance Company The candidates receiving the highest number of votes will become Mayor of the Juvenile Community

Miss Richardson who will have charge of the nursing classes was introduced and in part said I don't know how to make a speech, but I do know how to work I will have charge of the classes in home nursing If you do not want to work don't join the class for I want every member of the class to work"

Dr Howard Pursell, chairman of the local Board of Health was introduced and spoke to the children He said in part During the past year there have been seventeen cases of typhoid fever nineteen cases of diphtheria and twelve cases of scarlet fever in Bristol, but not one of them resulted fatally This splendid result was attained through the knowledge of and ability to battle with germs Nearly all diseases come from germs These germs are very small, ten thousand of them will float through the eye of a needle They cannot be seen with the naked eye Germs develop rapidly One germ can produce a million more in twenty-four hours We all have within us a natural germ destroyer and if we keep ourselves in good health, and in cleanly condition, we will be able to kill the germs There is nothing better to destroy germs than fresh air, and if we have plenty of fresh air in our living rooms and our sleeping rooms live in the open air as much as possible and keep our feet dry we can destroy the germs before they can affect us"

Mrs. K S Peirce President of the Public Welfare Association, was introduced and expressed her pleasure at being in a "think club," a club whose members are to be taught to think for themselves, and think of others She said "It is a splendid movement We will have the finest town we have had in twenty years, because the boys and girls are helping Each of the speakers were heartily applauded

The children were then grouped in the centre of the room and a flash light photograph taken Before leaving the building the children were treated to grape juice and wafers.

The first men to fly across the English Channel in a balloon were Blanchard and Jeffries two pioneer French aeronauts, who performed their epochal feat 129 years ago They ascended at Dover and crossed the channel without any mishap, descending at Calais The first flight across the channel in a heavier-than-air machine was made in 1909 by Bleriot. In the same year Latham made two unsuccessful attempts to perform the same feat Blanchard, one of the participants in the first balloon trip across the channel was the inventor of the first parachute, which was successfully used in 1785 Mme Blanchard was the first woman aeronaut to give her life in the cause of the conquest of the air. Mme Thible was the pioneer female aeronaut, making her first trip in 1784 Blanchard was also the first to make a balloon ascension in America, performing that feat at Philadelphia on January 9, 1793. George Washington was among the awed spectators who witnessed the rising of the balloon from the yard of the Quaker City jail The "father of his country" was very much interested, and gave the daring Frenchman a passport that he might receive kind treatment when he reached the ground again.

It is plainly evident that the old Democratic leaders of Montgomery county, who followed the fortunes of Guffey, are determined to accomplish the defeat of Congressman Difenderfer if they can, at the primaries next spring When it came to dispensing patronage the Congressman was not felt it encumbent upon him to consult 'Charlie McAvoy and therefore that individual will exert himself to the end that Mr Difenderfer has hard sledding at the primaries McAvoy and his cohorts, it is figured would be in a better position as distributors of "pap" with a Republican Congressman representing the district, because in that event, having control of the Democratic county committee, the officers would be distributed upon the recommendation of that organization Upon this subject Editor Moser, of the Collegeville Independent, says

The politically dethroned McAvoy in making a desperate struggle to regain its lost prestige, appears to be trying to create a special prosperity His chief aim at present is to prevent the renomination of Congressman Difenderfer, and his sympathizing correspondents are exerting themselve accordingly To an onlooker on a tree or telegraph pole it seems quite clear that McAvoy is struggling indirectly for the election of a Republican Congressman in 1914 A Republican Congressman from this district, with a Democratic administration at Washington might help McAvoy to do something handsome for himself politically He expects the Democrats of this county to help him to again get on his feet and encircle his neck with political regalias, at whatever cost to Democracy Will they do it

REVIEW OF EVENTS AT COUNTY SEAT

Interesting Correspondence from Our Doylestown Representative.

Doylestown, January 14

Real winter seized the county seat in its firm grip on Monday and gave us the coldest day of the winter, so far The wind had a great velocity and as it never hi sanything from the time it leaves the Blue mountains until it strikes the corner of the court house it has a whole lot of time to gather force Overcoats and warmer clothing were in immediate demand and the clothing stores got rid of some of what they had expected to be surplus stock in short order All this was on Monday morning for at about half past three o clock in the afternoon, owing to a defective flue Doylestown very early had the east end of the town wiped out by a fire that started in the double frame dwelling occupied by Louis Dick and John Rufe The wind was blowing a severe gale and the blazing sparks were carried to buildings nearly a half mile away setting them on fire The location is the highest point in the town and when the force of the wind is the strongest Aid was again called for and the companies from Jenkintown, Willow Grove, Chalfont and Wyombe again gallantly responded and helped to confine the fire to the houses in which it started. Jenkintown making the sixteen mile run in a little less than forty minutes The loss on the two houses, owned by the Parry estate of Philadelphia, will be about fifty-five hundred dollars partly covered by insurance and the two tenants also had insurance Dick five hundred dollars and Rufe one thousand dollars Dick lost everything including wearing apparel but Rife was more fortunate and saved a portion of his house hold goods including a hundred dollars in money while Dick had thirty dollars that was in the house burned up After the last fire the town council was solicited by many citizens to take some action leading to the betterment of our fire fighting apparatus but with their usual don't-do-today-anything you-can-put off-until tomorrow way of doing business nothing was done or even attempted to be done The excuse is that the borough does not have sufficient borrowing capacity to suit some of the members of council who are interested in financial institutions that would be only too glad to handle an issue of municipal bonds for their own advantage and they positively refuse to raise the tax rate in the face of a strong public sentiment in favor of their doing so

The greatest public need at present is an independent supply pipe from the water works to the stand pipe that can be shut off in case of fire allowing the direct pressure to go into the pipes alone and not overflow the stand pipe as it did on Monday when the gate shutting the water from the stand pipe either was not shut off or was out of order.

The next thing the county seat people know will be a very decided raise in their insurance rates which will cost the price of several new shut-offs and more thousand feet of hose than the fire company will ever use and they will have to buy the shut-offs and the necessary hose anyhow

Our fire company handicapped as it is by the parsimony of borough council, does yeoman work in fighting fires and is made to blush for shame when asked what it could do to help its kindly neighbors Jenkintown, Willow Grove, Chalfont and Wyeombe The county seat company has the spirit and the willingness to go help a neighbor but what in the world could they take with them outside of a few old fire extinguishers which should have been replaced long ago by a first class chemical engine and the engine will probably come in the near future but not through borough council, but through the liberality of a few individuals who always have to step into the breach and stand for what all of the tax payers ought in common honesty and decency pay

John Philip Sousa, the 'March King" spent last Friday in the county seat, the guest of Mr. and Mrs William C Newell, and took in the various sights of the town including the court house, jail, school buildings and the historical society, the latter place being much more attractive to him than the building on the opposite side of the street, the jail He was very much pleased with the county seat of all Bucks all people of good taste and judgement must be and though he would like to live here

Chicken next to the late fire is the principal topic of discussion here just now for our annual poultry show is on and the crow of the rooster is very much heard in the land There are fowls of all kinds and the capacity of the armory is being taxed to hold the exhibit which, if it increases next year as it has this, will have to overflow into the basement But the interest in the show is of much more importance than the show itself and lots of non exhibitors who own poultry are on the look out for better stock to improve their own flock and listen eagerly to the many discussions on feed, housing and other chicken talk by the many experts who are hardly able to leave the show long enough to eat and sleep

Politics, at least the Congressional situation, is still occupying the minds of a large number of wise, and other wise men at the county seat The candidacy of Croft the candy man, who has already been dubbed "Candy Croft" does not seem to worry the followers of Grundy who seem to have no doubt but that Oscar Bean will again walk off with the nomination by the G O P The worry is over the figures of two years ago and over the candidacy of Thomas K Ober the candidate of the Progressive or Washington party His large vote undoubtedly came principally from the Republican party and will it increase or decrease this year? Hope whispers a decrease but stubborn facts indicate an increase Then again there are the apparently irreconcilable differences in the Democratic party What will McAvoy do if Difenderfer should again secure the nomination as he lack of the movement to have the nomination to Bucks county and is Harry Grim his candidate? For it is upon the differences among the Democracy that Grundy bases his hopes of electing Bean this time Who will be his legislative candidates? Of course Bucknan will hope to succeed himself but with his old opponent, Wynne James, against him he will have a good deal harder road to travel than he had four years ago even if he does favor a revival of the tadpole industry and contemplates starting a plant near Rockhill Of course he is slated but who will be his running mates and will they be able to strengthen both Bean and Bean sufficiently to secure his election even at the cost of their own defeat? By next week there will be some indication of which way the cat will jump but all plans are laid with the idea of sacrificing everything to make sure the election of Bean to Congress and to this end Montgomery county will be better taken care of this year than it was two years ago when Pete looked after Bucks and Grundy personally bossed the job in Montgomery It is rumored that the versatile Pete will live in Norristown for at least three months before the election and run the Montgomery end as he alone can do

Cold Facts

The attorneys for the plaintiff in a suit before Federal Judge Smith McPherson of Iowa were attempting to introduce into the record the case the diary of the deceased mother of the defendant which contained references to a love affair between her daughter and a wealthy defendant also dead against whose estate the suit was brought The court finally ruled that the diary might be admitted but before so ruling he told the jury this story

"Down in my country said Judge McPherson Bill Lacefield was trying to keep from paying his landlord the rent due on the farm he had been working It was necessary for Bill's attorneys to show that the winter had been an especially hard one To prove the extent of the difficulties under which Bill had labored Bill's diary was introduced and among the entries laid before the jury was this

A Guileless Chinese Artist

In the fourth century A D there lived in China an artist who was also a poet His name was Sun Kwa Chih In London there is a painting, a long scroll which for the last six thousand years has been the subject of his work and though that cannot be proved it is in all probability a painting by his hand One day we are told he intrusted to a friend a chestful of paintings which he had collected For better security he fastened the lid of the chest and sealed the fastening with a seal The friend however coveted the paintings and hit on the simple expedient of removing the bottom of the box and so abstracting them When the box was restored to Sun K'ai Chih he broke the seal and found it empty But he suspected no theft and expressed no surprise Beautiful paintings he said communicate with supernatural beings They had changed their form and flown away like men when they join the immortals.—Louis Binyon in Atlantic

Glowworms Use Anaesthetics

Before he begins to feast the glowworm administers an anesthetic He bites into his victim thrilling in the process the wonders of modern surgery which render the patient insensible before the surgeon operates on him The usual game is a small snail hardly the size of a cherry which in hot weather collects in clusters on the stiff stubble and other long dry stalks by the roadside reminding there motionless in profound meditation throughout the scorching summer days It is in some such resting place as this that I have often been privileged to light upon the lamprey's banquet ing on the prey which he had just paralyzed on its shaky support by his surgical artifices

But he is familiar with other preserves He frequents the edges of the irrigating ditches with their cool soil their varied vegetation a favorite haunt of the mollusk Here he treats the game on the ground and under these conditions it is easy for me to rear him at home and to follow the operator's performance down to the smallest detail.—Henri Fabre in Century Magazine.

White House Tragedy and Gayety.

Between 1841 and 1844 the White House saw a greater mingling of tragedy and gayety than it ever did in any equal interval before or since William Henry Harrison, Tyler's immediate predecessor died when only a month in office, and Tyler served out the remainder of the term Mrs Letitia Tyler died a few months after her youngest daughter Elizabeth, was married to William Waller of Virginia This was on Sept 10 1842 In February 1844 a great gun burst while exhibiting it on a trip down the Potomac in the midst of a brilliant company, among whom were Tyler many members of congress and of the cabinet, and other distinguished guests About forty persons were killed or injured Among the killed were the father of Miss Gardiner who soon afterward became Tyler's second wife Although married while her husband was in the White House the second Mrs Tyler had her wedding at her home in New York but she held her reception in the executive mansion She became popular in Washington society and undoubtedly strengthened the social side of her husband's administration.—Charles M Harvey in Leslie's

Salt Germs

Salt of all things, we deem germ proof but, as a matter of fact, salt is one of the most germ ridden foods we eat"

The speaker a physiologist continued

You know gray salt the 'gros sel' that gourmands eat with boiled beef Well that salt is made gray by the addition of mud plain mud hence it always contains from 6 000 to 75 000 bacterial colonies per gram Refined salt white salt, is almost as bad It lies you know in the refinery under a blanket of clay and its refining consists of a sea water bath, after which it is dried and heated to the point of crystallization All this fails of course to remove from it its 2 000 or 3 000 bacterial colonies per gram that it imbibed from its clay blanket The same food people should look to our salt This white clean stuff is alive with germs Yet it would be easy to refine it so as to make it germ free"—Exchange

Unexpected

One of the dignitaries of the Church of Scotland was a minister of a remote parish before he leaped into fame but was not considered a particularly eloquent preacher At his suggestion extensive alterations were made in the church which had the effect of sweeping away considerable seating accommodation One day after the alterations had been effected he visited the church to see how it looked

"What do you think of the improvements John" he asked the beadle

"Improvements" exclaimed John in disdain There re no improvements at a Whaur are 'ee goin' to put the folk?

Newton's Shock

The immortal discoverer of the law of the attraction of gravity was at one time beside himself In his fiftieth year Newton suffered the severe shock from which he never fully recovered A dog upset a lighted candle and precious manuscripts embodying the results of many years experiments in optics were destroyed In consequence of this Newton's mind lost its balance Brewster denies this but about its truthfulness there is not much room for doubt It is certain that for a considerable time his letters were quite incoherent and to be accounted for upon no other hypothesis than that of a disordered mentality Newton slowly recovered and lived to be eighty three years old

French Detective's Revenge

M Caichas the famous French detective, was noted for his skill as a 'shadower Having quarreled for administrative reasons with M Lepine during the latter's reign at the prefecture, he threatened to have his vengeance

It's no use trying to kill me said the prefect genially I am too well looked after for that

I've a much better and less obvious plan than that I retorted the detective

Just wait and see

A week later M Caichas appeared in the prefect's study and presented an ominous document It was the record of M Lepine's doings day by day hour by hour almost minute by minute since their last interview and it was with rather a wan smile that the prefect perused it Satisfied with his characteristic vengeance the detective assured M Lepine that the dossier for that week would not be given to the world.—Paris Cor London Telegraph

A Bird With Hands

In the forests of British Guiana says the London Globe lives the monkin a singular bird whose young possess a free claw at the end of each wing which they use almost as the monkey uses his hands in tree climbing The nest of the hoactzin is in a tree overhanging the water and the young unlike most birds, are active from the first The outermost quill feathers of the wing which might hamper the free use of the claws do not grow much until the rest of the wing is strong enough to make climbing less necessary Then they grow out and the claws are absorbed The adult bird does not need them Should a young hoactzin fall into the water it makes for the shore and seizes a branch up which it quickly climbs

THE REAL ISSUE

I lent so much the wages you set
For the long days toil you did it
And sweat
It left you much the numbness
plunks
You get for the sale of yourself in chunks
It isn't even many slim pennies back
You find in your envelope Saturday night—
It isn't that that counts with you
It is what you get
With what you get
For the work you do

If your wage is big, as that of the boys
And your balance owes you
of toys
When you're paid your checks current bills
For food and clothes and fuel
And frills
And what you waste in various ways
If all of it goes and none of the stays
Then you're well off
It's what you
With what you get
And how you do it

If your pay is small and you live within it
If you don't work like thunder to begin it
If you give a little from what you make
For the rainy days that sure to break
Then you're richer far than he who looks
Far better off in the company he books
It isn't the money that you get
It's how you get it
And how you do it

High School to Give a Supper.

On January 29th the Bristol high school will give a supper in their building to raise money for a new piano The present one has served well for eighteen years but a new one is greatly needed This is the first time the high school has ever given a supper and they hope to make it an unusually interesting and successful affair The patrons of all the schools are asked to co-operate, for the high school piano is for the use of all The children in all the grades look toward the high school as the final goal, and the public generally enjoy entertainments or meetings when the piano is used The splendid response of the people at the time of the Jefferson avenue supper assures us that the same will be true this time Notify as soon as possible either teachers or pupils as to what you will give and be sure to be present on January 29th This supper will be served in the basement of the high school, which is very large and well adapted for the purpose and no high steps to climb

BRISTOL ASSESSED SUBURB PLANNING

At the meeting of Bristol borough council held on Monday evening Burgess Thomas Scott transmitted a letter and statement he had received from the Suburban Metropolitan Planning Commission of which Joseph R Grundy of Bristol and Arthur P Jones of Langhorne are members levying an assessment of $151 on the assessed valuation of property within the borough in accordance with an act of the Legislature

In writing to the burgess and council on the subject the secretary of the commission George Sullivan, explains that the commission does not propose to compromise any local government but wishes to work in harmony with it and also that it was not created for ornamental purposes but to help and assist the communities adjacent to Philadelphia in solving the problems that are now or will confront them in the near future and work together for the common good

A letter from Alba B Johnson, chairman of the commission states Dear Sir

In accordance with Section 8 of the Act of Assembly session of 1913 The Metropolitan Suburban Planning Commission have prepared their estimate of its expenses for the year 1914 and have fixed the assessment at one twentieth of one mill on your tax duplicate We have your duplicate [illegible] which at one twentieth [illegible] mill makes your assessment $151 Please make provision for the same in your budget for the ensuing year and kindly remit as soon as possible I certify the above as correct

Meets Old Friend After 52 Years

It isn t often a man will recognize a boyhood acquaintance after 52 years of separation Yet it is a mighty pleasant thing as J H Vansant of Bristol, will testify for that very thing happened to Mr Vansant only a few days ago, says the Philadelphia Record He was visiting Cramps' shipyard on business when he saw a face that seemed very familiar He gazed for a few minutes into the countenance and then suddenly realized that it was his old friend, William Luffberry whom he had not seen since 1862 Of course the face was changed considerable but back of all the changes Mr Vansant still detected the outlines of the youthful countenance he used to know so well He walked up to Mr Luffberry who is a caterer at Cramps, and seized him by the hand Mr Luffberry stared at him blankly until Mr Vansant explained who he was It took a long time for the caterer to recognize his friend but when he finally did they had a long talk about old times and promised not to allow another interval of 52 years elapse before they would meet again

BIG REVIVAL AT METHODIST CHURCH

The most remarkable revival in the history of the Methodist church since it has been in its present location had its inception in a series of meetings which were inaugurated last week

On Thursday three persons were seekers at the altar and on Friday evening two more sought the better life The climax was reached on Sunday afternoon when five of the scholars professed conversion and Sunday evening five more were added to the list Then again on Monday evening two others were seekers

A remarkable feature of the meetings is the fact that no special efforts on the part of an evangelist or outsider has been enlisted only a straightforward appeal by the pastor being made

Tuesday evening there were four and on Wednesday three more were added to the list, making a grand total of seventy

Put on Your Glasses
AND READ THIS:

I can stand for the chap with the monogramed shirt,
And the boy with his trousers upturned,
And the man with the hat made of plush I assert
I can stand though the fad I have spurned.
I can stand for the guy with the white in his vest
And not even grin when he passes.
But I snicker and smile, when I gaze on, the while
The guy with the tortoise shell glasses.

I don t mind the man with the rakish green hat
With the bow in the back, nor the fellow
Who trims off each shoe with an up-to-date spat
Nor the brother whose gloves are bright yellow
But I m ready to flee when that dandy I see
The guy with the tortoise shell glasses.

I can put up with him who must trim off each sleeve
With a row of pearl buttons, and note
In silence the man (though I secretly grieve)
With the braid on the edge of his coat.
The man with the handkerchief worn to be seen
[illegible] my feelings harasses.
But [illegible] to smite, with my left and my right,
The guy with the tortoise shell glasses.

All the go, however.

Ezra Dalton's Will

For Reasons of Modesty the Widow Did Not Have It Filed.

By ELLIOTT FLOWER

Copyright by S. S. McClure company

When Kittie Wingram married Ezra Dalton it was generally understood to be a financial transaction of the kind customary in the polite world. Kittie was young and pretty, while Ezra was old and rich. But Kittie was not one of these unbusinesslike girls who leave everything to chance. No, indeed, she was a thoughtful and worldly maiden, who knew how to look out for herself and her future. She insisted that his will must be made out in her favor in the way that she should decree and left in her charge.

"Everything must be left to me," she said, "and the will must be absolutely in my keeping. Too many girls in our set have been fooled by codicils and other changes."

To this he agreed, and the day after the wedding she demanded the fulfillment of his promise.

"I will have the new will drawn up and executed today," he said, "and tonight I will give it to you. I regret to have to cut off one or two relatives who have been kind to me, but you shall have everything."

"It is because I know you will regret that," she replied, "that I shall not be satisfied with any will that I cannot have always with me. No safe deposit box would give me the sense of security that I need in order to rest easy."

"Surely you cannot be in earnest, he protested. "You cannot carry it about with you. It would be lost or stolen."

"The way that I intend to carry it," she answered, "will preclude the possibility of loss or theft and further more, will make it impossible for you to get hold of it and change it. I shall have it tattooed on my arm."

She laughed in a triumphant way as she said this, while Ezra gasped. She was not unmindful of the fact that he still might make a new will, but she thought the circumstances would deter him, especially as the destruction of the other would be impossible.

"On your arm!" he repeated, as soon as his astonishment would let him speak.

"On my arm," she said, with determination.

"You are prepared, then, to give up the wearing of short sleeve gowns?" he suggested, whereat she grew suddenly pale.

"Good heavens!" she cried. "I never thought of that!"

"You have a beautiful arm!" he went on insinuatingly.

"True," she admitted, "and it's beauty must be preserved. I have no right to deprive society of so fair an arm. I will have the will tattooed on my shoulder."

"Would your ball gowns conceal it?" he asked solicitously.

Again she was startled by the suggestion for in truth there was very little of the shoulder that a ball gown would conceal. This, of course, was due to the fact that she belonged to the world of fashion, and in consequence it would be manifestly absurd and provocative of comment to with draw the shoulders from exhibition.

"Well," she said after a thoughtful pause "perhaps it would be better to have the will tattooed where I am vaccinated."

Now she thought the matter settled, but this was because she was unacquainted with the legal requirements in such affairs. He looked at her and smiled in a way she did not like.

"As you please," he returned disinterestedly, and then he added, as if it were a matter of slight importance, "I presume you do not forget that the will must be signed by two witnesses and attested by a notary."

Her perturbation was great, but in a minute or two she recovered her composure.

"Is that case," she asserted, "I shall have the will tattooed just beneath the shoulder blade, and the notary and witnesses shall be women. Thank heaven that women have invaded some departments of the business world."

From this decision it was impossible to move her. She wanted all and she lacked confidence in him. She knew that it was human nature to dislike to pay for goods that have been a long time in one's possession, and she feared that with the passing years he might try to scale down the price. So she secured the tattooed will—a will that could not be destroyed, changed, lost or taken from her—and the only thing that seriously disturbed her during the operation was the question of the notarial seal. Ezra suggested that a large seal that could make a proper impression upon her should be specially made, but she repaid him for that later. It was finally tattooed on her from an imprint that seemed shiveringly cold when it was made. Still she was not entirely happy. She had hoped to have the will where she could always see it just to reconcile her to her bargain, but she found it necessary to inspect it as she did her back hair by using two mirrors, and it was so difficult to read it that it took her three days to make sure that the terms were in accordance with her instructions. Still there was satisfaction in knowing it was there, for when she became disheartened and dissatisfied (as is frequently the case with modern wives of ancient husbands) she had only to remove her waist and arrange the mirrors to experience a feeling of placid contentment.

But soon she became an enigma to her friends. She did such strange things and made such extraordinary remarks. For instance she gave up the use of rocking chairs entirely.

"I have noticed," she said, "that no matter how gently one rocks the motion results in a sort of rubbing of one's back by the back of the chair."

"What of it?" asked the friend to whom this remark was made.

"Don't you wish you knew?" she retorted.

Then she evinced a strong repugnance to massage, which she previously held to be conducive to beauty and health. Indeed, when the subject was mentioned she shuddered and once exclaimed, "Heavens it might rub out!" In a crowd, too, she exhibited great distress. If any one brushed roughly by her so as to touch her right shoulder she became perceptibly pale and promptly endeavored to back into some corner where she would be reasonably safe. Naturally there was speculation, then gossip.

"That old brute of a husband beats her," some one suggested.

"Why, of course," another exclaimed. "That explains everything doesn't it? Her back is probably a mass of bruises."

Just as this was satisfactorily settled by the gossips and every one was wondering how long her pride would keep her out of the divorce court she still further puzzled them by a remark of an entirely different nature. Some thing was said about the value of a beautiful skin to a woman, a particularly fair debutante being under discussion.

"It is priceless," one of the party asserted. "It cannot be put in figures."

"Oh, I don't know," returned Mrs. Ezra Dalton in a dreamy way. "A few square inches of mine are worth $8,750 000."

On another occasion she asked if she walked straight.

"Certainly," was the reply. "Why?"

"I feared I might sag a little on the right side," she answered. "I am carrying a fortune there, you know."

She also told a gallant young man who had said that woman was worth her weight in gold that if she cared to do it, she could demonstrate that she was worth a good deal more than that.

"SHE SAID SHE WAS WORTH MORE THAN HER WEIGHT IN GOLD."

But she instantly regretted this, for he demanded the proof, and her confusion was such that the gossips were more excited than ever.

The time came, however, when curiosity was satisfied for old Ezra Dalton died. No will was filed for probate, but application was made direct to the judge to settle the estate.

"Is there a will?" he demanded.

"There is," replied Mrs. Dalton's attorney, "but"—

"Has it been filed?" asked the judge.

"Filed!" ejaculated Mrs. Dalton with a shudder. "Why it would be barbarous to file it. I think how it would hurt!"

"It has not, your honor, answered the attorney. "You see—"

"Then file it," broke in the judge "and notify all the parties in interest."

"There are no parties in interest except my client," explained the lawyer. "It leaves everything to her."

"Well the will must be filed, just the same," said the judge irritably. "When the clerk of the court notifies me that it is in his possession I will set a date for the hearing."

"In his possession!" moaned Mrs. Dalton. "Has—has he got to keep it?"

"Certainly," said the judge in surprise.

"And he's such a homely man too," she wailed. "I'd be very unhappy."

"If your honor please," said the lawyer to the puzzled and astonished judge, "the circumstances are such that my client cannot very well part with the document."

"Can't part with it!" exclaimed the judge, feeling that a serious affront had been put on the court. "I guess she'll part with it quick enough if this court so decrees. I'll see to that!"

"No no! Oh no!" cried Mrs. Dalton, hastily backing toward the door.

The judge was now thoroughly aroused.

"Officer, stop that woman!" he ordered. "There's some mystery or some trickery here, and I intend to have the matter cleared up. Now, madam, he went on, as she approached under escort of the policeman, "I want to know if you have that will with you."

"It's very much with her," said the lawyer quickly, "but"—

"I'll look into this matter, sir, without any further help from you," said the judge sharply. Then turning to Mrs. Dalton he again demanded to know if she had the will.

"Yes, sir," she answered faintly.

"Let me see it."

She looked at him pleadingly but he was stern and unrelenting.

"I—I can tell you every word of it," she urged.

"Won't do," he said.

"And—and the witness and the notary can tell you just what it says. It's very short."

"Madam," he announced harshly, "there must be no more trifling with the dignity of this court. The mystery must be bared."

"Bared!" she repeated, with a shudder. "Bared!"

"Show me the will," he ordered.

Her attorney tried to speak, but was again silenced. She hesitated but finally her womanly indignation came to her relief.

"I won't," she cried defiantly.

"Committed for contempt of court," said the judge. "Take her into custody and keep her until she is prepared to permit that will to be delivered into my hands."

"I'd rather be filed with the clerk of the court," she pleaded, and then as the officer approached: "Don't you touch me, sir! How can I be sure that some of it may not yet rub off?"

The judge looked at her blankly and then beckoned to the lawyer.

"Why didn't you tell me she was crazy?" he whispered when the latter had reached his side.

The lawyer leaned over and replied in a very confident tone.

"No?" said the judge when the lawyer had finished.

"Fact," said the lawyer.

The judge scratched his head thoughtfully and then laughed.

"What are you going to do about it?" he asked.

"I don't know," answered the lawyer. "We can't very well file the will."

"Now admitted the judge. That wouldn't do at all. He took a hurried man. How many common law heirs are there?"

Only two besides the widow and there is both personal and real property.

Don't you suppose you could compromise the matter?" suggested the judge. "To all the facts it seems to have no contest."

Acting on this suggestion they had yet had a whispered consultation with the two other heirs, and then Mrs. Dalton was asked to recall the conversation that could be substantiated, but only an occasional sentence could be heard by others in the court room. Once Mrs. Dalton was heard to say angrily: "I won't! I will!" the lawyer responded. But that of the annoyance of being recalled and all a then a little later her voice could be heard saying: "I won't! I won't! I won't!" even if I have to be held in contempt of court." One of the other hours was heard expostulating: "Of course it is in your power to cut us off without anything but it certainly is worth something to you to escape the bother and on such occasion this answer had been in negative one still he persevered, and one night on a moonlight walk with the soft south wind blowing caressingly he once more started to tell her of his wondrous love.

"Della dear," he tenderly remarked, throwing away his cigarette to give his eloquence further play, "there is something that I must tell you before we return. You have heard it before but"—

"Look here, Jimmy," impatiently interrupted the beautiful girl, "how many more times are you going to ask me to marry you?"

"Not many, I guess, Della dear," answered the young man with great frankness. "One of the other three girls that I am proposing to is beginning to show signs of weakening."—Philadelphia Telegraph.

White Bread

Hygienists have long called attention to the serious consequences of the increasing popular preference for white bread. At present dark colored bread is despised as peasants' food. In the towns the mass of workmen will eat only white bread. The flour used for making this bread is obtained by passing the meal through a very fine sieve, so that it contains hardly anything but starch and cellulose. White bread which plays an important part with the French people is thus extremely poor in really nourishing food and it is to the increasing consumption of it that many hygienists ascribe in France the racial enfeeblement, the diminution of stature and even the present development of tuberculosis. Representations have frequently been widely made on this subject but without effect, for the bakers can provide only what the public demands.—Paris Letter to London Lancet.

Some Surprises For the Doctor

There is a story current about a widely known London doctor. About 3 o'clock one morning he was rung up by a wealthy patient and begged to come over at once. Turning out of bed he rushed off expecting to find the man in extremis. Imagine his surprise at being ushered into a dining room where a gay supper party was assembled. The first remark made to him was 'Oh doctor I am so glad you have come. We wanted you to settle a bet as to exactly where the diaphragm is.' He not only told them where the diaphragm was but a good many other things. The patient tried to mollify him by asking his fee. Still furiously angry he named a staggering one, which to his surprise was paid on the spot.—London World.

FOR STOMACH TROUBLE

John W. Skillen of Sidney, Ohio, Has Found a Remedy.

Experts declare that the reason stomach disorders are so common in this country is due to hasty and careless habits of eating. Stomach troubles and run-down conditions usually go together.

John W. Skillen of Sidney, Ohio, says: "I had a bad stomach trouble for years, and became so weak that I could hardly walk or do any work. My appetite was poor, and it seemed impossible to get any relief. Since taking Vinol I find a remarkable improvement in my health, my digestion is much stronger, and I have gained in weight. I would not be without Vinol."

Vinol makes weak stomachs strong because it strengthens and tones up the weakened, tired and overtaxed nerves of the digestive organs. Vinol is easily assimilated by the weakest stomachs, and is delicious to the taste.

Try a bottle of Vinol with the understanding that your money will be returned if it does not help you.

THEIR EYES BELIE THEM.

Seals Are Ferocious and Devour Live Fish Inch by Inch.

Seals are still numerous and are distributed in the northern fishermen because their skill is so much greater. Dr. Grinnell says that he has known a seal to hunt a net so persistently that to get at the fish the animal had to watch the net at one end of it and even then the seal would almost snap off the fisherman's hand as he raced to be first to disentangle the salmon.

The large, gentle eye makes the seal's face innocent, extremely attractive and it is inclined to be sentimental if it is found in him a great scope for their fashions. As a matter of fact, he can be as fierce as he will take a bite out of a fish and leave the rest to struggle on until the slowly. They are fierce fighters and will entech and can quite swimming on the surface of the water.

One was seen devouring a salmon alive. The seal swallowed him by inches, swimming a mile while the struggle lasted. It seemed an open question whether he would succeed or not. Another seal was seen to capture a gull on the water, but the persistent hunting he got from the rest of the birds persuaded him to let the wounded victim go.—Chicago News.

MANAGERIAL ABILITY.

If You Think You Possess It Here Is a Test You Might Try.

Any one who has to manage men or things must be able quickly to bring order out of confusion. Test your friends talent in this respect by writing on torn paper five words of a splendid cross, such as the names of five flowers or of five animals or of five famous poets with the first letter always in the right place while the order of the other letters is changed.

The person on whom you are experimenting knows only to which class the words belong—whether they are the names of animals or of flowers or of poets. See how long it takes him to write the five correct words in place of the misspelled ones.

The animal card may read "Tetrul, elephph dikeno seridp gallfro," and the vegetable card "Velito, diloffad inchip motosuma cuttnesh." Some persons will be able to read at once. Turtle, elephant, donkey, spider, gorilla, and the other card "Violet, daffodil, maple, mushroom, chestnut."

Others who have no talent for rearranging the elements of a confused situation will stare at the words, unable to make out more of them.—Hugo Monsterberg in Youth's Companion.

Reasonable Mistrust.

"Now let us try," she said, "to keep the other passengers from discovering that we are a bride and bridegroom."

"All right do your best," he replied. "How shall we deceive them?"

"Buy a couple of magazines, and we will pretend to be busy reading them and avoid noticing each other."

That's a fine idea, sweetheart. I'll get them right away."

Twenty minutes later.

"Lovey!"

"What is it, dearest?"

"You are holding your magazine upside down."

"Oh, George, if you are going to begin being critical now how shall I ever be able to endure you after we have been married for five years."—Brooklyn Eagle.

Oriental Gems

All gems of the finest quality irrespective of the part of the world from which they come are generally spoken of as Oriental because the supply of precious stones came only from the east for many centuries and when mines were discovered in the west, it was at first assumed that the stones were inferior. "Occidental" is the term applied to inferior stones to this day.

On the other hand, Oriental topaz," Oriental emerald and Oriental amethyst are really all sapphires, and are given these names only on account of their color.

The Old School Slate.

Remember the old school slates, bound in red flannel to prevent the noise of slate rattling that used to become unbearable until manufacturers found how to muffle them? Stores selling school supplies used to carry great stocks of them for it was a rare day in a room that did not see a slate or two broken but where are they all now? Since the boards of health decided that they were insanitary and decreed against them the whole tribe has disappeared.—Columbus Dispatch.

One Voice Music.

Composers have not scorned writers, to suit the style of particular singers, thus, as Francis Rogers remarks, storing up for the usual voices of subsequent generations much travail and pain. Mendelssohn crowded "Hear Ye Israel" with high C sharps to please Jenny Lind whom he adored a fact to display the particular beauty of her voice in that region with the result that that air has been a sore trial to most sopranos ever since. Laure the famous French baritone also had a particularly facile and melodious high F sharp and many parts were written especially to give him a chance to exhibit it to the gasping multitude. But in most baritone voices this F sharp is the very limit of the upper range and although it may have both power and brilliance it seldom possesses either mellowness or facility, consequently all the folks written for Faurse (Meyerbeer) Dinorah for instance are particular trying for the ordinary baritone.—Argonaut.

Wearing Shabby Clothes

It's a great thing to wear shabby clothes and an old hat. Some of the best things I have ever known like these experiences of the streets have resulted from coming up to life from underneath of being taken for less than I am rather than for more than I am.

I did not always believe in this doctrine. For many years—the years before I was rightly born into this alluring world—I tried quite the opposite course. I was constantly attempting to come down to life from above. Instead of being content to carry through life as a sufficiently wonderful being named David Grayson I tried desperately to set up and support a sort of dummy creature which so clad so housed so fed should appear to be what I thought David Grayson ought to appear in the eyes of the world. Oh I spent quite a lifetime trying to satisfy other people!—David Grayson in American Magazine.

Kleptomania

The paragraphist opened his typewriter adjusted a sheet of paper, lit his pipe and sat for a moment immersed in thought. Then he clicked off a single line of copy. He glanced at what he had written and a look of surprise came across his classic features. Then he gasped, shrieked and went into a fit of hysterics.

His colleagues rushed into the room but he was beyond human aid. In ten minutes he had laughed himself to death. Then one bethought himself to look at the last lines those fingers now cold and still had written. At the top of the nil but unsullied sheet appeared these words. Another shop lifter arrested in one of our big stores has been dismissed with a warning and her name withheld from the papers. What used to be called a crime is now yclept a mania."—

That was all. But it had caught the paragrapher unawares.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Curious Signboards.

An eighteenth century Glasgow sweep suspended over the door of his house the announcement:

Barny Keir he does live here.
He'll sweep your vents, and not soo dear,
And should they chance to go on fire
He'll put them out at your desire.

Edinburgh once enjoyed the distinction of possessing the most prolix sign board on record:

"John Main, stationer. Bibles, Testaments, Psalms, Hymns, Prayer books, Catechisms, Proverbs, Books, new and old, in various branches of literature. Money or exchange for old books, Papers, Pens and Ink. Wax and Wafers. Blacklead, Hair and Hair Pencils. Colored Books. Memorandum Books. Religious Tracts. Bear Fighting.

Monument to a Quack.

"That the men who make great medical discoveries and who perform wonderful surgical operations are honored in life and that imposing monuments to their memory are reared when they have passed away seems only fitting," says a writer in the Hamburg Fremdenblatt, "but that a quack whose name as such has for generations been known in Germany should be thus honored is remarkable. There are not many children in Germany who do not know the song which begins thus:

"I am the Dr. Eisenbart.

The blind I treat so that they walk

What Misses Sound Like to an Actor.

In the American Magazine David Warfield giving his stage experiences tells how terrible it is from the actor's point of view to be hissed.

"I next appeared at the Wigwam telling stories and giving imitations. I came a terrible cropper, something fearful. I was second in the bill which is the worst place but one. I shall never forget the anxiety I felt on that occasion as I stood in the wings waiting for my turn to go on. At last I appeared before the footlights. The audience was shifting in shuffling in a desultory way. I could not get its attention. It was awful, awful. The few friends I had there applauded me, but the others hissed. It sounded as if 10 000 steam pipes had burst. A hiss to a sensitive man and all actors are sensitive since all are vain—is like the strike of a rattlesnake. It is so venomous so cruel so unnecessary! It is as if you had done the people out in front an injury with malice prepense instead of having sincerely tried to please them. You don't even dare to face your own mother, you're so dreadfully guilty."

Kept the Opposition Busy

The only instance known wherein an employee was paid by his employer for gambling occurred in New Orleans. Walter Lamama, a child of wealthy Italians, was kidnaped, and the interest was intense throughout the gulf coast country.

The staffs of the two leading morning dailies were engaged in drawing after hours when the city editor of one of them was called out. He summoned a reporter.

"Get back in there and play at the paper's expense!" he hissed. "Make it lively!"

The reporter raised 'em and hoisted 'em and lifted 'em for an hour.

Then the game was broken up by cries of 'Extra! Extra!' and the staff of the other paper read with emotion that the body of the child had been found.

There was a ten dollar check from the editor in the reporter's envelope next pay day.—New York Tribune.

Fifty Yards on the Head

The curious miter shaped headdress worn by women of quality in Spain during the middle ages is described in "The Queens of Aragon" by E. L. Miron. It consisted of an undercoif with plaited edges, covered by a second resembling a Phrygian or Catalan cap, the flat point falling over like that of a nightcap. These miters supposed to be of oriental origin, were introduced into Spain by Beatrice of Suabia, queen of Ferdinand the saint of Castile. Very hot and heavy they must have been, considering that sometimes as much as fifty yards of material were used to make them. They were fastened under the chin by a ribbon or band. The same writer refers to the silver, bed bidders used for climbing into the high medieval beds.

An Extraordinary Projectile

A child's struggles with the intricate facts of history are sometimes almost as serious a matter to him as the battles of which he reads. The results however, are not always without humor, as a story in Everybody's Magazine shows.

A small boy handed in the following in an examination paper in United States history.

"General Braddock was killed in the Revolutionary war. He had three horses shot under him, and a fourth went through his clothes."

Silence Hour.

One mother of a large household has a system of recreation which is really a novelty. The day and its duties are carefully apportioned, and the schedule is followed as closely as possible. By doing this the mother is able to take one afternoon hour a day for complete rest. In her case it is from 2 to 3 o'clock. She places a large placard at this time on the stairs, proclaiming "Silence." By the mother's persistence in taking this quiet hour others have grown to respect it until it has become a part of the home. In her home the mother really rests or else sends. No one goes near her unless it is absolutely necessary. The children close doors quietly when they see the placard and play where their voices will not reach the mother's room. At the end of the sixty minutes the mother reappears and takes up her usual duties. Seven hours of absolute freedom a week can do a great deal to make over and refresh a weary body and still more weary brains and nerves. An hour for rest in almost every household can be found if things are done systematically.—Buffalo Times.
